

Doi Inthanon Family Day Trip

1
Day

Morning

The Royal Chedis

Built in honor of their majesties' 60th birthdays, the two stupas feature interesting architecture and tiled murals around their bases. Gardens on promontories at the feet of the stupas to the west are magnificent viewpoints.

Time to spend here:
60 min

Ang Kha Nature Trail

A 350-meter long boardwalk treads lightly through cloud forest over a unique sphagnum moss bog. The summit itself is marked by a stupa containing the ashes of Chao Inthawichayanon, who gave the mountain its name.

Time to spend here:
60 min

Hmong Market

On the way down, stop off at the mountain market where Hmong hill folk sell fruits, vegetables and other products grown in their plantations on the mountain.

Lunch

Food vendors at km 31

Local kitchens serve all-comers good Thai food to order at an open-sided hall in front of the park HQ at Kilometer 31.

Afternoon

Siribhume Gardens & Falls

The trail goes through a Hmong village to reach an ornamental garden and the foot of the Siribhume Falls. This point offers good views over the area to the east.

Time to spend here:
45 min

Wachirathan Falls

No trip to Doi Inthanon is complete without a visit to arguably the most spectacular falls on Doi Inthanon.

Time to spend here:
30 min

Wat Ton Khwen

On the return back to Chiang Mai, it would be a shame to pass up an opportunity to visit one of the most beautiful extant small temples in the north, Wat Ton Khwen gives the feel of what a small rural temple must have been like in the late 19th century.

Time to spend here:
20 min
